

Talking Movies Coming To Tinley With "Traveling Husbands" As Feature

Tinley Park is going to have the very latest in entertainment beginning this week by way of a talkie-movie show, the first to appear in country towns. The show is to be put on at the Saenger Hall in Tinley Park on Saturday of this week, March 19th by the Community Entertainment Co., of Chicago.

There will be a matinee at 3 p. m., and a night show at 8 p. m. The big feature will be "Traveling Husbands" in which you see smoking cars and upper births; lunch at one with a buyer from Peoria; a letter to the wife and flowers for the blonde at the Biltmore Plaza; flashes thru hotel rooms with lingerie models helping the tired salesmen forget their business; the morning after with a heavy head and a big order to land. That's "Traveling Husbands" to be offered at Tinley Park; baring in whizzing sequences, reminiscent of "The Front Page" in sky rocket action, the intimate life of the traveling man—the life the wife back home never learns of, but often worries about.

In addition to the feature mentioned there will be a Pathe News Reel, Mickey Mouse Cartoon, and "Our Gang" Comedy.

After the evening show there will be free dancing for all with music furnished by electrical transcription. This talking movie is operated with an RCA Photophone complete portable talking motion picture equipment. The same sound equipment used in the portable form is now in use at the Palace, State-Lake, RKO Englewood and 3000 other theatres. The equipment is made by the Radio Corporation of America. The producers guarantee a real worth while show and full satisfaction or money will be refunded.

The talking movie mentioned has the endorsement of Mayor Wm. Mohr of Tinley Park and Grover Elmore, the well known real estate man.

See back page for adv. giving more particulars and the remarkably low admission price. It is the intention of the Community Entertainment Company to put on a talking movie program each week.

Arrest Woman For Bigamy

The forepart of this week a man and a woman walked into the Funk store in Tinley Park and the woman who said she was from Wisconsin, asked Mr. Funk if he knew anything about a white woman and a Chinaman living together near Tinley Park, saying the woman was her daughter and that the man was her husband and that she had not been divorced from him before she married the Chinaman. She also stated her daughter is the mother of three children. Mr. Funk asked the man if they lived apart and he said he and his wife had a spat and that his wife suddenly left Wisconsin and that they had learned she was living with a China man near Tinley Park. Mr. Funk told them that a Chinaman had recently received a shipment of baby chicks at the Tinley Park post office and that he resided at Oak Forest. The mother and her son-in-law took the matter up with the County highway police and a warrant was sworn out for the arrest of the white woman and her Chinaman husband, but when the officers arrived they only found the woman. She was arrested and will be tried in a Harvey court. It is said she is a dope fiend.

Tinley Basketball Tournament News

An elimination tournament with eight teams starting will begin on Thursday night, March 31, at the beautiful Tinley gym.

Representatives of the teams competing chose Tinley Park, because of its centralized location and large gym. The teams are from Mokena, Manhattan, Matteson, New Lenox, Orland, Frankfort, Tinley Park, and either Midlothian or Oak Forest.

At six-thirty on March 31 a representative of each team will "huddle" and draw straws to see whom they'll encounter first. (Better be there early cause your team may be first to take the floor.) At the end, of which promises to be a hectic night of basketball, the four winning teams will face one another on the following night, Friday, April 1. The two winners of this affair will meet on Sunday afternoon, April 3 for championship, as will the losers to battle it out for third place.

The champions will be rewarded with eleven gold basketball charms. (each team being allowed ten players and a coach.) Second place will receive silver basketball charms, and third place will get the ball that is used in the tournament.

It is a well founded rumor that the idea of having these eight towns in this tournament is to form a league for football, baseball and basketball in the near future. So let's all go "ovah" to Tinley on March 31, April 1st and 3rd and encourage this wonderful project.

Community Sale Goes Over Big

The second community sale held this winter in Orland township took place Wednesday on 143rd street east of Orland. The weather being fine several hundred buyers attended this sale which was the best of any held this season. Everything up for sale found ready buyers at prices that were considered in these times of depression. The top notch price brought for horses was $100. Farm machinery seemed to be much in demand and brought very good prices.

These community sales are proving very popular and in fact there has been so big a demand for a similar sale in near future, that promoters have decided to hold another one on the old Van Horn farm on the Lincoln Highway in Frankfort township on March 29. Anyone having any stock, farm machinery, etc., which they would like to sell can consign same to this next sale by seeing or calling Fred Yunker, sales manager, phone Orland 52-M-2, Edward Schmaedeke, auctioneer, phone Orland 54-M-2 or Chas. Erickson, auctioneer, phone Mokena 53-M-2.

The candidates then went to Frankfort where they had a very interesting meeting.

The speakers were: Rev. Henry Ebert, Pastor of the Evangelical church of Manhattan. Prof. Adolph Staussen, of Hamburg University, Hamburg, Germany.

Dr. Londus Brannon, Candidate for Coroner.

Ernest H. Bennett, candidate for Clerk of Circuit Court.

Black Locust Has Many Uses
Black locust is a four-purpose tree, says the United States forest service. It quickly produces good timber for posts and other uses; it roots strongly, thereby checking soil erosion; its flowers enable bees to make a good quality of honey; and it is a legume. The nodules on its roots store nitrogen in the soil, enriching it for future crops. In addition, it is a tree of beauty and is valuable for shade.

The Owens Illinois Glass company at Streator now employs approximately 420 men and further increases in the payroll are expected within a short time. Employment will be afforded to between 75 and 100 additional men and it is possible that within the next few weeks, the number will be increased beyond that figure.

At the Chicago shops of the Pullman Manufacturing company, about 400 former employees have been called back to work. During the next two or three months work will be done on air conditioning of passenger and dining cars for various railroad companies.

The Gellman Manufacturing company of Rock Island, Ill., is contemplating the construction of a $50,000 foundry to be built adjacent to its present building.

At Virginia, Ill., two buildings are being combined and remodeled at a cost of over $2,000 for labor and materials. The newly remodeled building will house a modern food center.

A movement toward the construction of a proposed municipal building has been launched in Lockport, Ill.

The weekly payroll of the Charleston (Ill.) unit of the Brown Shoe corporation amounted to $12,250 recently. The unit at Mattoon, Ill., has a payroll of $4,900.

The American Legion drive against unemployment secured more than 60,000 jobs for unemployed men during the first week of activity. It is expected that jobs for many thousands more will be secured before the drive ends.

According to the Seventh Federal Reserve district, the automobile industry on January 15 showed its third successive monthly increase in employment, and a slight increase in the payroll.

A very favorable sign is evident in the fact that during the month of January the number of men who went to work in the manufacturing industries was greater than those laid off. According to the Federal Department of Labor, the automobile industry showed the greatest increase.

Gov. Louis L. Emmerson has announced the appointment of George Gale Gilbert, Mt. Vernon, as chairman of the Illinois commerce commission.

Seven of the major buildings at the Century of Progress, Chicago's World's Fair in 1933, have been finished or are well on the road to completion. Within a few weeks, construction of more than $4,500,000 of additional buildings will be started. Forty states have either made appropriations for their exhibits or appointed commissioners to negotiate for display spaces.

Dr. Henry C. Barbour of Yale university recently reported to the National academy that the function of the liver is that of saving heat when the body is chilled or at the onset of fever.

This Little Girl Got Well Quick

"Just after her third birthday, my little daughter, Connie, had a serious attack of intestinal flu," says Mrs. H. W. Turnage, 217 Cadwalder St., San Antonio, Texas. "It left her very weak and pale. Her bowels wouldn't act right, she had no appetite and nothing agreed with her. Our physician told us to give her some California Fig Syrup. It made her pick up right away, and now she is as robust and happy as any child in our neighborhood. I give California Fig Syrup full credit for her wonderful condition. It is a great thing for children."

Children like the rich, fruity taste of California Fig Syrup, and you can give it to them as often as they need it, because it is purely vegetable. For over 50 years leading physicians have recommended it, and its overwhelming sales record of over four million bottles a year shows it gives satisfaction. Nothing compares with it as a gentle but certain laxative, and it goes further than this. It regulates the stomach and bowels and gives tone and strength to these organs so they continue to act normally, of their own accord.

There are many imitations of California Fig Syrup, so look for the name "California" on the carton to be sure you get the genuine.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

(By REV. F. B. FITZWATER, D. D., Member of Faculty, Moody Bible Institute of Chicago.)
(© 1932, Western Newspaper Union.)

Lesson for March 20 JESUS DIES ON THE CROSS

LESSON TEXT—John 19:17-22; 25-30.
GOLDEN TEXT—For I delivered unto you first of all that which I also received, how that Christ died for our sins according to the scriptures.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus Gives His Life for Us.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus Gives His Life for Us.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Jesus Dies for Us.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Why Christ Died.

This lesson presents the greatest tragedy of all time. No record in the annals of history approaches it. It is in a real sense the climax of all history. Though unique in its blackness, from it flows streams of life and liberty for all the world. It is highly important that every teacher have the personal experience of Christ's death for himself and then endeavor to get his pupils to see that Christ's death was instead of their own death. We escape judgment because the judgment we merited fell upon Christ.

I. The Place (v. 17).

It was on a hill called in Latin "Calvary" and in Hebrew "Golgotha," which in shape resembled a skull. This hill is a few yards outside Jerusalem. This is a most significant name for the place where man's redemption was accomplished. The skull is an apt picture of man's condition as a result of sin—life and intelligence gone, leaving only the dark empty cavern.

II. His Companions (v. 18, cf. Luke 23:33).

Two malefactors were crucified with him. Their names are not given. This was in fulfillment of Isaiah 53:12, "He was numbered with the transgressors." He was sinless, but became sin for us.

III. The Inscription over Him (vv. 19, 20).

It was customary to place an inscription over the cross, stating the crime for which the victim suffered. Although Pilate did this in bitter irony and contempt, he uttered a great truth, affirming more than he intended.

IV. Gambling for the Garments of Jesus (vv. 23, 24).

This was a fulfillment of the scripture, "They part my garments among them, and cast lots upon my vesture" Ps. 22:18. This is an exhibition of how men's hearts may be so calloused as to plan an act for present gain under the shadow of the cross of Christ.

V. Utterances from the Cross (vv. 25-30).

1. "Behold thy son—"Behold thy mother" (vv. 25, 26). In this crucial hour he forgot his own bitter anguish and interested himself in those he loved. This is a fine example of human sympathy, and especially of filial love at its best.

2. "I thirst" (v. 28). As the sinner's representative, he suffered not only untold agony of mind, but of body as well.

3. "It is finished" (v. 30). While no one can fathom the depth of meaning in these words, they no doubt indicate a. That the calamities and indignities heaped upon him were at an end. His trial was grossly illegal. False witnesses were employed to incriminate him.

b. His awful sufferings were at an end. The penalty of the unnamable and indescribable sins of the world were resting upon him, wringing from him the pathetic cry, "My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?"
c. The fulfillment of every type and prophecy.
d. His life of perfect obedience.
e. The great work of redemption. "Finished" means more than ended. It means "accomplished." All that he started out to do was now completed.
f. The judgment of the world and the casting out of Satan. (See John 12:31.)

"From this point on there was no more humiliation, insult, or outrage. From the moment when the spear-thrust made it certain that he was actually dead, no cherished infant form could be more tenderly taken in arms, wrapped in clean linen with aromatic spices, and laid at rest in a faultlessly clean chamber. Neither was he ever again seen by an unfriendly eye. Truly, as to all sorrow and suffering and vicarious agony, it was finished."

VI. His Death (v. 30, cf. Luke 23:44, 45).

His death was voluntary. It was unlike any other death in all history. By an act of sovereign will he dismissed his spirit. No one took his life from him. He had power to lay it down and power to take it up again. So shocking was the crime that nature herself threw around the Son of God a shroud to hide him from the godless crowd. Darkness was upon the land at noonday.

SOLENN THOUGHTS

Tact comes as much from goodness of heart as from fineness of taste.—Endymion.
Reserve is the truest expression of respect toward those who are its objects.—De Quincey.
"As time passes, the sinner will center in self and become more selfish, and a Christian's life will center in God and become more Christ-like."

Howell Endorsed By Legion

James A. Howell, candidate for the Democratic nomination for Representative in Congress for the Eleventh District, and Oscar Carlstrom, Republican candidate for Governor, were endorsed this week by the Ex-Servicemen's Civic League of Will County. Both candidates have been in the military service of the United States, and their endorsements were the only ones made by the League, whose members number five hundred.

The Ex-Servicemen's Civic League of Will County is a non-partisan organization and exists only in the interests of ex-service men. The League plans to hold two big rallies before the Primary Election.

Hargrave Advocates Prohibition Repeal

Edward J. Hargrave, of Chicago, Republican Candidate for Congress-at-Large has started his state-wide campaign. Mr. Hargrave, who is running on a platform for repeal of the prohibition laws will visit in every county within the next few weeks.

Campaign headquarters have been opened in the Auditorium Hotel and at his private office, 145 N. Clark St., Chicago, with E. J. Stratton, publisher of the Egyptian Republican as Manager of Mr. Hargrave's Campaign.

The candidate also favors revision of existing banking laws necessary to better safeguard depositors; Collection of Foreign Debts; practical farm relief and consolidation of overlapping government bureaus and commissions to reduce taxes.

Campbell Pledges Honesty in Gov.

Declaring for absolute honesty in government and pledging himself to see that the citizens of Illinois get such government, Bruce Campbell of East St. Louis, candidate for the Democratic nomination for Governor, again is visiting downstate counties this week. Mr. Campbell is attacking the practices, common in machine politics, of awarding state contracts to favored contractors; buying of supplies and materials from companies controlled by politicians; and padding of payrolls to reward political workers.

Mr. Campbell emphasizes his independence from machine politics and stresses the fact that his nomination will be sure success for the Democrats in November.

"In fact," Mr. Campbell says, "Democrats and Republicans everywhere are predicting that I am the only candidate for Governor who can win in November. I have already visited more than fifty counties in the state and my reception in every county has been enthusiastic and crowds unheard of in Illinois political history have greeted me in every place. I have also received in Cook County assurance of a large vote there that will surprise the politicians on primary day. I am confident of my nomination."

Concerning honesty in government Mr. Campbell says in his speeches: "Honest and efficient government is the natural desire of all good citizens. Where political considerations prevail in government over the interests of the people, even though there be no real dishonesty, the government will soon cease to be efficient. Grover Cleveland's statement, made nearly half a century ago that public office is a public trust, is just as true now as it was when he said it."

"Various elements have crept into government that destroys its efficiency. Jobs are given to political workers solely as a reward for political services and without regard to merit or capability. In many instances new and useless jobs are created to take care of those whose political influence, in the opinion of the politicians, merit reward."

Look Out For Fake Eye Glass Dealers

The public for a long time has been falling prey to shyster advs., newspaper and radio, of optical stores which offer, intending bait, "free examination," "complete and thorough examination," white gold frames instead of white gold-filled frames, and generally misleading come-ons. Individuals have followed out advertisements for lenses "for near and far vision" at a low price and then found at the store the examiner would find some astigmatic difficulty which would cost more money, much more. People with little money whose eyes were slowing their output on the job that the unemployment period have found they could not afford the cost of examination and the prescription of lenses perfectly adjusted to the need, and they have tried to take advantage of bargains offered daily in newspapers, only to find the bargain tied up with tinted lenses, costly frames and "special features" which robbed.

Seeing the growth of this eye racket and knowing its effect upon honest business, representatives of the newspapers, optometrical societies and Better Business Bureau met last week to formulate a code of ethical advertising. They designated a wide difference between what the optical salesman offered as bait. They tabooed terms confusing to the public, upon which much hokum might be made to hang.

No field that comes closer to the public's need could have been made the object of reform. These are hard times and many people need glasses to continue their earning power—or even to look through the classified Men Wanted. Hokum and fake in this business under the circumstances, with the health of the eyes involved, is a particular type of greed that is almost criminal.

Horner Pleads For Farmers Relief

Relief for the Illinois farmer thru the reduction of taxes was pledged by Judge Henry Horner, regular Democratic candidate for governor, in an address at Alton on Tuesday. He declared that it was up to the state to do everything possible to improve the lot of the farmer.

Judge Horner said that he did not agree with those candidates who were dodging the farm issue on the grounds that it was solely a national and international problem. He asserted there are measures of relief which can be brought to "the farmer directly thru the state government and indirectly thru the leadership of the state in a national effort to save the situation."

"One thing the state government can do without doubt," said the jurist. "It can and should reduce the farmer's tax burden. We have literally run riot with public expenditures. In days of prosperity we did not complain. We paid the bill. But now neither farm land nor city real estate can longer bear the burden. It has not the capacity to pay. And part of that burden must be shifted from the land to something else. But above all, the sum total of tax collected must be drastically reduced to the lowest possible figure. In the economic condition in which we find ourselves today, it is nothing short of criminal to collect one dollar taxes that is not absolutely necessary to maintain the essential public service."

A SMASHING HIT "DEATH TAKES A HOLIDAY" Takes Chicago By Storm

Chicago now has an outstanding comedy hit in "DEATH TAKES A HOLIDAY," at the Playhouse. George E. Wintz, the producer, has assembled one of the greatest casts ever brought into Chicago for this beautiful vehicle of Love, Passion, Beauty and Life.

"DEATH TAKES A HOLIDAY," is an unusual story wherein Death disguised as a mortal, decides to visit this world and discover for himself just why men and women, in fact all mankind, is so loath to leave life for his domain. He takes on the guise of charming young Prince Sirki, and becomes the week-end guest of Duke Lambert at his Italian palace. For three days he studies the hopes, ambitions, joys, griefs and emotions of his fellow guests. He meets and falls deeply in love with the lovely young Princess Grazia, and so learns to know to fullest extent power the true meaning of life about him. With the necessity of his return to his own domain, a real dramatic climax is also attained, a climax so compelling, so intriguing, so fantastic as to leave the theatre patron and his neighbor in a state of breathless discussion.

asks the Tax-payers if they know that a PHYSICIAN as CORONER is an expensive luxury, or do they think that they are getting the services as a PHYSICIAN thrown in for good measure??

For the months of June, July and August a three month period or one-fourth of a year, the records in the Court House show that the CORONER collected $848.00 for holding 53 inquests at $16 each and that he approved his own bill for, and collected $200.00 for holding eight "autopsies" at $25 each. Was $200.00 worth of crime exposed??

A New Letter of Lincoln's Humanity Found In Indiana

A new example of Abraham Lincoln's humanity and sympathy for people in trouble was discovered recently in the archives of the Lincoln Historical Research Foundation.

It was contained in a letter to the martyred president from a young Philadelphia woman dated April 5, 1864 in which she poured out her heart to Lincoln and told him the story of her troubles. She had been engaged to a young man, who in 1863 enlisted for three years in the army. After a few months service was sent to a hospital sick. After his recovery he, with some other soldiers, was permitted to return home for the election. That was in 1863. The young woman said she had intended to get married while he was home, but due to the objections of her father, the soldier returned to his regiment a single man. The young woman confessed to the president that there had been intimacy between them and begged Lincoln to send her fiancé back home so that they could be married and prevent an "unlawful family" as she expressed it. In conclusion she wrote: "I hope and pray to God you may not cast me aside in scorn and dismay."

Nine days later President Lincoln sent the girl's letter to the secretary of war, with the following annotation in his own handwriting: "Hon. Secretary of War: Send him to her by all means."

That terse command, dated April 14, 1864, answered the girl's pathetic plea and brought happiness to her and her soldier sweetheart.

The Boy Scouts are preparing a program for a meeting to be held in the presence of St. John's Brotherhood. The date set for this meeting is April 1.

Progress has been made on second class tests, especially signaling and first aid.

HENRY JONES

Oscar E. Carlstrom—Lawyer, Soldier, Leader!

OSCAR E. CARLSTROM was born July 16, 1878, on a farm in Mercer County, Illinois. His life, in its early days, was like that of thousands of his fellow citizens. He still lives in Alledo, Illinois, in the modest home in which he has brought up his family, in typical American fashion. His interests have been the interests of his neighbors and friends, and these men and women have been his staunchest supporters all his life.

EDUCATION, a consuming ambition with Oscar E. Carlstrom, was begun in a small crossroads school. High school, at New Boston, was five miles away. Twice a day, riding a horse in all kinds of weather, he made this distance. Determination, will to go ahead, was early seeded in his character. Strength of body, virility and vitality, distinguished him then and distinguishes him today.

THE money that Oscar E. Carlstrom saved from his work on the farm enabled him to achieve his first ambition—study of the law. In Alledo, Mercer County, the town that is yet his home, he began, at 20 years of age, to read law in the office of Bassett and Bassett. Law, as he gained its knowledge, was not the routine of college and law school but the steady day-by-day absorption of its fundamentals and intricacies by reading—poring over volume after volume of the library at his disposal in the office of his sponsors. Many other leaders have had the same background, have traveled the same road.

RECOGNITION was not long withheld. In 1916, Oscar E. Carlstrom was elected State's Attorney of Mercer County. He had already been made a member of the law firm of Bassett and Bassett, later Bassett and Carlstrom. His majority was the largest ever given any county officer in the history of Mercer County. An outstanding characteristic of his life is his sustained and continued interest in the problems of his constituents. Ever progressing, but never leaving undone any task undertaken for those that have placed their trust in him. No loose ends, no promise unfulfilled—a thoroughness of accomplishment attending every pledge.

They DROVE from Spokane to Coeur d'Alene

Without OIL...and Without Damage.....Proving the Value of the GERM PROCESSED
"Hidden Quart"Coeur d'Alene, Idaho, is 33 miles from Spokane, Washington. A Ford Model A coupe, in which Conoco Germ Processed Oil had been used, was driven from Spokane to Coeur d'Alene with the crankcase completely drained of oil!Ford mechanics at Coeur d'Alene dismantled the motor—and found it in perfect mechanical condition, unharmed by a 33-mile run with the crankcase empty!What dramatic proof that Conoco Germ Processed Oil gives safer lubrication at alltimes than oils not Germ Processed. An oil that could stand such a test will give you surer protection in every-day driving!Conoco Germ Processed Oil is the only oil that actually penetrates and combines with metal surfaces. A "Hidden Quart" stays up in your motor and never drains away! This ever-present film cuts down costly starting wear. It saves gas. It gives your motor longer life, with fewer repair bills.For the surest protection, change to Conoco Germ Processed Oil at the sign of the Conoco Red Triangle.We neither encourage "dry crankcase" experiments nor guarantee success under all conditions.
But unsolicited letters from motorists, now in our files, tell of this and hundreds of other runs with empty crankcases but without damage.

to the opponents 347 points.This finishes the season with a percentage of .824. The team averaged 33 points per game while the opponents averaged 20 points per game. Notable victories were those over Beecher 58-12, over Orland 54-15, Frankfort 35-34-three over games and lost seven, scoring 295 points to the opponents 270 points.

The grade boys were handicapped very much because of lack of material, but the boys did well considering the fact that there were only seven boys who practiced and played regularly.The grade boys finished the season with a percentage of .500. They averaged 18 points per game while their opponents averaged 17 points per game. Outstanding games were the three overtime period games with Fairmont which Mokena lost 23 to 21 and the Orland Park game which Mokena won 15-0.

WORLD'S DEBT TO WHITMAN AS POETModern Writers Fulfilling His Prophecy.

American poetry in the still young Twentieth century underwent momentous changes of mind and heart. We have witnessed a renaissance, a new birth, almost a revolution, which is not concluded, but is in vigorous process.

It is a chapter in the complex chronicle of thought, culture, life of our time; it is a beautiful, vital, heartening chapter in a record much of which is not lovely, as many of the poets have felt and sadly sung. They have done much to interpret and redeem the evil and to glorify the good.

Our poets are intensely American without being provincial; modern as this morning's sun, but not ignorant of man's oldest traditions or unaware of the timeless values. Even when there is no visible trace in them of Whitman's form and individual thought, many of them are fulfilling in their private ways the prophecy which he made of poets to come after him, the declaration of independence which he pugnaciously announced and of which he was in his own time the solitary signer.

It is our generation—not the decades before us, not the men who were children during his maturity—it is we and not our fathers who have fully understood Whitman. He set American verse free long before "free verse" was talked about. It was not in form, but in substance that he sought liberation for himself and his successors.

He believed, and his successors all believe, all take it for granted no matter what their special subjects, that anything under heaven or beyond can be expressed in the open daylight of poetry. He protested against bookish words and poetic diction.

Our poets can be orotund and rhetorical and swing through the heavens with verbal volubilities, but most of them aim at simplicity and find new richness in the old words that are the life of us and can never be worn out. The versifier who uses a rubber-stamp phrase will be pitied or laughed at by his brethren, sent to the foot of the class until he learns better.—John Macy in Current History.

Short-Sighted Germans

Statistics derived from investigations conducted by the German government show that Germany may very properly be designated as the "Land of the Short-sighted." Nowhere else in the whole world is there a country where there is a larger percentage of near-sighted people. Of the German states where vision defects are most pronounced, Saxony was discovered to be at the head of the unenviable list. There, out of every 1,000 adults, more than 200 are affected with myopia.—Neues Wiener Tagblatt, Vienna.

Heart of the North

by William Byron Mowery

Joyce hesitated. She was aware that Alan deeply wanted her company. After all he'd done for her, it seemed cruelly ungrateful to refuse. And she herself wanted to go. But bitter wisdom whispered a warning. Since that morning when she turned his letters and picture and gifts to ashes, there had been no looking back. There must be none now. She had strength and courage to talk with him calmly and to act toward him as though they had never been more than good friends; but she dared not presume too far on that new-born strength. To be alone with him two hours on a twilight river, with their talk inevitably drifting to former times—it would be unbearable.

With gentle firmness she said: "I'd like to go Alan. But I'll have to run back to the post. There's so many things to do." She tried to smile. "I don't want to be a neglectful hostess to Bill and Mr. Featherof."

As she started up the river trail, her thoughts brooded on several things Alan had said in the course of his story, especially on his occasional references to Elizabeth. Not that he had said anything derogatory about Elizabeth. But his tone, his manner. . . . Was he becoming a little disillusioned? Was he seeing Elizabeth Spaulding not as the sister of his dead partner Curt, not as a girl to be cherished and shielded, but as a selfish, calculating person? Was he dimly foreseeing what his married life with her was going to be?

Joyce checked herself sharply from hoping or even thinking that Alan might break off his engagement, or from extending him anything more than grateful friendship. She was glad, profoundly glad, that his words had caused no resurrection of hope, no tremor of emotion. The discovery of her strength suffused her with a kind of pride. But for all that, she felt a great sorrow for Alan. He was bitterly unhappy, and she knew it. What was his situation now? Police work, his life in the North, comradeship with his old friends—everything that he had cherished was stripped away from him, and he was going into a marriage reluctantly and forcing himself into a life that was alien to his whole nature. When Joyce thought of all that, her sympathy, tender and compassionate, went out to him wholeheartedly.

Returning at deep twilight with the drums, Alan found Buzzard cleaning fouled spark plugs on the plane engine.

Candles were already lit in the trading store. Alan looked up the path, expecting to see Joyce's figure in the lighted doorway. He hoped to have an hour or two alone with her this evening. But all day the conviction had grown upon him that a talk would be worse than useless. If only God's truth didn't sound so preposterous; if only he could tell Joyce that he had become engaged to Elizabeth, had expected to marry Elizabeth, and yet all the time, in his deepest longing, had wanted not Elizabeth but her. . . . "If we're going to get away from here first thing in the morning," Buzzard broke into his thoughts, "we ought to put in a couple hours' work after supper on these aileron leads. They're pretty bad frayed around the pulleys."

Alan knew that Buzzard was asking him to help with that job. But he did not answer. He wanted this evening with Joyce. Unless he took circumstances into his own hands tonight, he and Joyce would drift across a continent from each other in a few days more. Torn with uncertainty of her affections for him, he was debating about this evening. After the incidents of today—his picture gone, her coldness, her refusal to go with him—he was wavering, undecided.

He tossed his cigarette out on the water. "Maybe we'd better go up and help Joyce what we can."

Buzzard did not stir. For several minutes he had been glancing uneasily at Alan. Finally he screwed up courage to speak.

"It's strictly none of my business, Alan, but—but. . . . You're engaged to a girl there at Endurance, but you bought Miss MacMillan that rainbow scarf with your last dollar and you talked a lot about getting back here and helping her—"

Alan was loath to speak of Joyce, even with a partner. He tried to say quietly: "We've been good friends for several years. She's one of the sweetest girls I ever knew. You've met her now. You'd naturally want to help her, wouldn't you?"

"Of course. But—but. . . . See here, I may be imagining things; you can tell me to shut up if you want to—but it seems to me there's something wrong between you and her."

Alan repeated, rather shortly: "We're good friends. There's nothing more than that."

Buzzard knew different. He had had a vague suspicion of it ever since Alan first mentioned Joyce MacMillan's name at the cafe in Edmonton. As he remembered the incident of this noon, he wondered at the Spartan courage Joyce had shown and at the passion behind such an act. Surely some bitter unhappiness lay between her and Baker.

He said reluctantly: "If that's true, if you're merely friends and nothing more, what made her burn up that scarf you brought her?"

"What!" Alan whirled on him, gasping. "Burn up that celture flechee?"

He half-rose. "You say that's what she did? You're sure about that? You didn't make a mistake?"

For a moment, groping about to retrieve his blunder, Buzzard hardly knew what to say or do. There had been no mistake; he had seen that incident with his own eyes when he glanced through the window to find where Alan was. He debated whether to draw back from his statement or to plunge ahead and tell the rest of it—Joyce's momentary battle, the shudder that swept her whole body when she put the scarf into the stove, and the quick blinding tears that she dashed away.

He thought: "Better not get any deeper into this. I'd only blunder again. Better back out entirely."

He stammered: "I might have made a mistake. I might—uh—it might have been the wrapping paper. I just merely saw her put—uh—something into—and I jumped to conclusions. Must have been the wrapper. Why would any person want to burn up a gift like that? Let's forget it."

His tones carried no conviction. He realized it himself. Alan disbelieved him; Alan knew Joyce had burned the scarf he gave her.

Cursing himself hotly, Buzzard looked out across the purpling river. He had meant only the best, and he had dealt Alan a savage pitiless blow. After a little time Alan said to him: "You'd better go up, Buzzard; she may be waiting for us."

"Aren't you going?"

"No—not now; I don't much care. . . . I don't want supper."

Something in his voice warned Buzzard not to urge him. As he turned away, Alan said, in the tones of a man who has made some hard and abiding decision:

"When you've had supper, come back down here; I'll help you with that work; we'll do it now, so we can get away early. I was thinking—for this evening—something else. But that's out—now. . . ."

"What!" Alan whirled on him, gasping. "Burn Up That Celture Flechee?"

At three o'clock the next morning Buzzard lifted the plane out of the Big Alooska. With Alan directing him, he headed due north.

One hundred and thirty miles away, nearly four hundred miles from Fort Endurance, a small tribe of Tinnehs lived along the western fringe of the Thal-Azzah. They were a timid, skulking, inoffensive band, shouldered into a region where other tribes scorned to live. Dave MacMillan had been their friend and they brought him their furs; and Alan, during his years at Endurance, had sent a protective patrol to them twice a year.

Joyce had found out where they were spending this summer; and Alan had a mission with their old headman, Mugwa-Etthen.

When the timbered country began yielding to lakes and semi-muskeg, he got out his glasses and started searching ahead for their camp. At a height of five thousand feet he could sweep a region of more than two hundred thousand acres. The eyes of an eagle, the wings of a bullet-swift curlew, and that big-barreled Browning machine gun—through luck and driving purpose and a faith in his dubious plan, he had smashed through obstacles till now he held the power and heavy odds over those bandits.

The sure knowledge of this was about all that was left to him. His

Races and Languages Huddled in Suez Area

The Port Said consular district in Egypt has three cities of importance: Port Said, situated on the northern extremity of the Suez canal, with an officially-estimated population of 108,502 inhabitants, of whom 25,000 are Europeans; Suez, at the southern end of the canal, with 40,300 inhabitants, of whom 8,000 are Europeans; and Ismailia, between the two aforementioned cities, with 25,194 residents, of whom 10,000 are Europeans. The preponderant element is almost entirely Egyptian Arabs, says United States Commerce Reports.

Egyptian Arabic is the language of the native population, while the foreign element converse usually in two work in the Mounted, his life here in the North, were both gone; and Buzzard's cataclysmic words last evening had showed him that his secret hope towards Joyce had been a fool's hope, a fool's wishful thinking.

How low he must have fallen in her esteem, that she should burn his gift to her! At first it had seemed a little cruel of Joyce to do that. But then he looked at the incident with relentless honesty, and he could not blame her. Once he and she had planned to marry. People had spoken of it; it had been generally accepted along the River. She had liked him, loved him. What must her feelings have been as she watched his relations with Elizabeth, and saw him engaged to another girl and coming no more to the Big Alooska? She must have felt shame, a burning shame, at being jilted. Month after lonely month of that—it had been an outrage to her girlhood. Nothing she could do to him could be so heartless as what he had done to her.

Through the propeller disk he at last sighted the Indian camp, a cluster of brown leather tents beside a lake where the band was passing the summer near their fish weirs. Buzzard roared over the camp and banked to alight. Old Mugwa-Etthen, a gaunt and wrinkled old savage, stalked up and gravely bade them welcome.

After this flood season of heavy rains, Alan knew there were a few areas in the watery wilderness of the Thal-Azzah where a party of men could camp. He himself had only a hazy idea where those areas lay; but this old headman, Mugwa-Etthen, who followed the Caribou, had lived his life along the border of that great marsh and knew it better than any man alive, and could probably give him a pretty definite idea where to look.

Very wisely, Joyce had kept from letting the nomad bands know anything about the police defeat. The Shagalasha maintained order in so huge a territory largely through their reputation of never failing, and the news of their stinging defeat would do incalculable harm. Joyce had not even told old Mugwa-Etthen.

After pledging the headman to silence, in guttural Tinnehs Alan began sketching the story of the robbery and battle. As he told of the bandits escaping up the Alooska, he noticed that the old chief suddenly became all interested.

Alan looked at him keenly. "Something's up," he thought. "I've stumbled onto something." He demanded: "When I wa-wa two three breaths ago you start like hit buck. Why?"

Drawing a crude map of the Thal-Azzah with his bony forefinger, the old headman sprang his astounding news.

Ten suns ago, he said, Tukeok and another young buck had gone westward into the Land of Many Waters to locate rat colonies for autumn trapping. One evening they heard the boom-boom of fire-sticks far away southwest. Slipping up, timid, cautious, they saw some strange men shooting waxies for food. They saw a tent, a camp on an island. . . .

For several minutes, fighting down a wild elation, Alan forced himself to crouch there, asking questions, fixing that map and that spot unforgettably in his mind.

At the wigwams he rejoined Bill.

"Come on! Let's be getting into the air! An hour and a half from now we'll be saying it with a machine gun. When we flew up here we brought our luck along!"

From his height of three thousand feet, reading the country spread below him, Alan could follow the crude finger map without once being in doubt. . . . That should be the great blue-water lake which Mugwa-Etthen had described. It should have islands in the center of it. On one of the islands near the north edge of the cluster the bandits should be camped, if they had not moved on.

"Swing north!" he shouted at Buzzard. "Those islets there to themselves. . . ."

The machine swerved and thundered closer. One by one Alan started to search the five. On the first one, nothing. On the second, nothing. But on the third. . . . He started suddenly as he caught that center one in clear focus. Below them on that center island, conspicuous to their sky patrol, stood a solitary dirty-white tent.

After a few moments Alan had presence of mind again. He leaned forward and shouted instruction:

"Drop down to a thousand feet. Fly over that island again. Slow. Want to study it carefully before we start things."

Who Was Who?

By Louise M. Comstock

MR. DOLLEY AND MR. HENNESSY

NIGHT after night Finley Peter Dunne used to while away down in James McGarry's saloon on Dearborn street in Chicago. Week after week there came from his pen those humorous conversations between Mr. Dooley and Mr. Hennessy which, throughout the late nineties and the early nineteen hundreds carried a half comic, half philosophical commentary on the news of the day which proved a common sense and healthful influence on the thought of the entire country.

Mr. Dooley was supposedly patterned on James McGarry himself, as far at least as his rich brogue was concerned; in thought and word he was undoubtedly his author, Finley Peter Dunne. Mr. "Hinnissy" was John J. McKenna, veteran politician of "Archie road," today chief inspector of Illinois employment agencies, and for half a century the newspaper man's best source of information upon interesting events in Chicago's history.

Mr. Hennessy's share in the conversations was merely to supply just the obvious commonplace remark needed to set Mr. Dooley's easy tongue wagging, seemingly inspired, in long expositions of current events, with a wisdom that served to set the opinion of many readers and a humor that served to smooth over much of the bitter partisanship of a day when party politics needed just such treatment. " . . . the Lord save us from harm," Mr. Hennessy would piously remark, and Mr. Dooley would be off: "Ye ought to know the history I platform. . . . Years ago, Mr. Hinnissy, many years ago, they was a race between th' dimmicrats an' th' raypublicans . . ."

WILD BILL

THEY called him "Wild Bill" Hickok, but his name wasn't William, at all, and instead of being wild, he was—most of the time—one of the quietest, softest-spoken men in the whole history of the frontier. His real name was James Butler Hickok, a native of Illinois, who served as a spy for the Union army in Missouri during the Civil war and later as an Overland stage driver and a scout for United States army troops in the Indian wars in the West.

The name "Wild Bill" was tacked on to him because of a desperate hand-to-hand battle he was supposed to have fought with the "McCandlas gang" while he was employed by the stage company. The only trouble with the story is that such a fight as has been described by many writers never took place. Official records in the Nebraska Historical society show that Hickok killed one man named McCandlas, a peaceful settler, and the manner of the killing was such as to reflect little if any credit upon Hickok.

Later as a marshal in various Kansas towns, Hickok made a brilliant record as a peace officer, being noted for the deadliness of his aim with a pistol and the lightning-like rapidity with which he disposed of various bad men. This enhanced his reputation as "Wild Bill," but it also led to his downfall. Eventually a would-be bad man, who dared not face Hickok and shoot it out, slipped up behind him as he sat at a game of cards in Deadwood, S. D., one day in 1876 and shot him down.

UNCLE TOM

A LONG-forgotten tombstone, cleared of accumulated rubbish and vegetation recently by a government weed inspector working near Dresden, Ontario, Canada, revealed the final resting place of Rev. Josiah Henson, regarded as the original of Uncle Tom, hero of Harriet Beecher Stowe's "Uncle Tom's Cabin."

The tombstone is in an old cemetery just five miles off the main automobile highway east of Chatham, during Civil war days a great gathering place for run-away slaves who had come up from the South via the underground railway. In Canada they were safe from the dread fugitive slave laws which facilitated their capture and return in the states. On the tombstone is the inscription:

"In memory of Rev. Josiah Henson Died May 5, 1883 Born July 15, 1789 Age 93 years, 10 months and 5 days."

It was in 1850, when Tom was in Boston on his way to Canada, that Mrs. Stowe saw him. She was so impressed, so go the reports, by his story of the brutality of certain slave owners, and by his description of the way in which his own father was beaten to death, that she resolved then and there to put him into print as the embodiment of her protest against the whole system of slavery.

Good in Silence

It doesn't pay to hold disrespect for others, no matter how they may impress one. To dispute endlessly with other people is a mild way of showing contempt for their opinions. The resentment which this course engenders is not to be incurred lightly, nor with out good and sufficient reason. It is better to keep one's mouth shut. But who can do it?—Exchange.

Head stuffed with CatarrhPut this cream up nostrils
—brings instant relief

If your head's all stuffed up and you're fighting for breath just put a little ELY'S CREAM BALM up each nostril and relief comes almost instantly—relief that lasts for 10 hours or more! This pleasant antiseptic is so remarkably good because it penetrates and actually clears out every air passage in the head, soothes the inflamed or swollen tissue and immediately enables you to breathe freely. Try it for clogged nose, Catarrh or head colds. WORKS LIKE A CHARM! All drug-gists sell it.

Wear Silk Shorts

as Farm "Uniform"

Dame Fashion wreaked havoc for a time in the lives of Russian village women. The trouble all began after the war when it became fashionable for women to wear short skirts. That fashion also became prevalent in the Russian villages, bringing sorrow to the women.

The women were sad because the fashion magazines told about short skirts, but told nothing about what should be worn underneath these skirts. And women in the Russian villages suffered for a long time from this lack of information, for no matter how they sat in the short skirts, the lace of the long pantalettes protruded.

This crying need of Russian women was met by the co-operatives, which turned out an infinite quantity of silk shorts. Hence silk shorts for women were sent to the most remote Russian villages.

It so happened that those shorts arrived in the co-operative stores at the same time as the tractors which were sent to the collective farms. Nobody knows who originated the idea, but somehow it was decided that these silk shorts were to go with the tractors; they became the uniform for the women who operated the tractors. Now the girls operating the tractors or collective farms wear only silk shorts, without any skirts at all, thus going far beyond all European and American skirt reductions and creating their own collective farm fashion.

We gasp to think what might happen to a shipload of Eugenie hats.—Boris Pilnyak in the Nation.

"Primitive Areas" for Parks

For the benefit of large numbers of people who crave the "back to nature" type of forest recreation, the forest service is establishing "primitive areas" in each of the national forest areas. The idea is to leave unimpaired unique natural values and give to the public so inclined an opportunity to experience conditions which existed in pioneer phases of the nation's development. Tourist parks filled with little cabins, facilities for cooking, running water, showers, etc., are a boon for the traveling, sight-seeing public, but there are thousands who will enjoy, appreciate and help conserve these "primitive areas" which will eventually form a part of all our national parks of sufficient area.

To Bring Back Prosperity

BY CALVIN COOLIDGE

If all the money in the country were divided equally—ownership of property involves a risk. No law, no regulation, no government supervision, no skill in management, has ever been devised that could protect invested property from temporary fluctuation and occasional loss. These are the hazards of our finite existence. Only omniscience can guard against them.

But that does not excuse us from making the most of what we have and doing the best we can.

While no one can tell with certainty what will happen to any particular property or what the market will do at any in life, we must take the risk of being responsible for the results.

If we could lay the blame for present conditions in our own country or in the world on society at large, against whom is the blame to be assessed? It is impossible to point out any general moral lapse, any widespread dishonesty. We may say it was the result of greed and selfishness. But what body is to be specifically charged with that? Were the wage earners too greedy in getting all they could for their work? Were the managers of enterprise, big and little, too greedy in trying to operate at a profit? Were the farmers too greedy in their efforts to make more money by tilling more land and enlarging their production?

Even if we could convict society on a general charge of selfishness, we could not point to any element that consciously brought about a condition of falling prices.

ONE of the serious results that come from the experience through which our country has been passing for the past two years is loss of faith. Because some have put their trust in things which they have found do not always endure, they draw the hasty and unwarranted conclusion that it is useless to have faith in anything. They propose to abandon all standards, seek only the easiest course, and live merely for the present, on the theory that they may as well eat, drink, and be merry, for tomorrow they die.

It cannot be denied that many people have had an experience which at first thought seems to warrant such an attitude. They had profitable employment on which they believed they could rely for a permanent income. That has gone, and they are unable to secure work. They had a house which ultimately they expected would be their own and would make a home for themselves and their family. They have been unable to meet the payments due on it and have seen it taken from them. Others have found that investments on which they relied for provision for their old age have turned out to be of much less value than had been supposed. Some have met with losses through the failure of banks in which they had money deposited.

It is easy, in these circumstances, for the individual to conclude that these disasters have arisen through no fault of his own, that it must be the fault of someone, and he is inclined to blame something he loosely calls society. Sometimes a feeling of injustice results in a threat of defiance against constituted authority.

Among all these people, those who most strongly appeal to our sympathies, those who seem most warranted in their discouragement, are the ones who want work and cannot find it. But even they should take the larger view of their situation. It is no new experience for a wage earner to be without employment. Such a condition has always been temporary. It will be temporary now. Surely the country will go back to work, back to production and consumption. The condition of the wage earner in America has long been the despair of all the rest of the world. Some hope should be derived from what has been and some confidence entertained that the same again shall be.

But a new element has entered into the situation of the unemployed. Heretofore, few have known anything about it, few have cared anything about it and nobody has done anything about it. Now the whole nation is aroused. There is scarcely a hamlet in the land where there is not an organization and active public effort for the relief of the unemployed. They will be cared for in an unprecedented way. We have had a tremendous spiritual awakening concerning our duty to relieve human suffering. It is true some homes have been lost through default of payments. That risk is always incurred when property is bought on credit. But even in this field, where one home has been lost, an enormous number have been retained. Their owners now find themselves securely and comfortably housed because they saved money and bought when they had an income, instead of spending all their money on rents and expensive living.

If all those who have bought homes in the last twenty years could be assembled, it would be found, in spite of some failures, that, as a class, they were distinctly better off than their neighbors.

The desire to build and own a home is one of the primal human instincts. It is especially strong in women. Even the present age of hotel apartments and flats is not likely to eradicate so strong a natural longing. But those who have given up the effort in despair or disgust certainly must live somewhere—if not in their own house then in the house of someone else. Their real position in the world is disclosed by supposing that everyone else followed their example. The whole race would be without shelter in about a generation.

Those who have come to the conclusion that they will do nothing to make themselves a home are injuring themselves most, but they are also injuring the whole community.

Any such scheme of things as their actions presuppose could not be put into effect. Nature and reason are both opposed to it.

When we examine the complaints of those who have lost through investments we find that they fall into three classes: Some lost because they were plainly swindled. We are enacting more and more laws and setting up more and more regulations and safeguards to prevent a recurrence of such abuses. The practice of swindling is very old, and larceny has never been eradicated from any community where property was abundant. But because someone does wrong does not prove that we shall all abandon trying to do right.

Others have used poor judgment in investments. Usually they have been tempted to take large risks by the hope of making large gains. Some did not make great profits, while many more suffered heavy losses.

Those who trust to chance must abide by the results of chance. They have no legitimate complaint against anyone but themselves.

Still others, using all the judgment possible for human beings and guided by the best financial advice obtainable, have seen their investments seriously impaired. But this simply means what everyone should know; that even when surrounded by all the safeguards and all the integrity which it is possible to secure, the particular time, the best financial judgment expects that, while further losses may accrue, sometime the general level of good standard properties will rise, so that some of the present losses will be reduced. Future prices at which property will sell are always uncertain.

—how much would you get?

There is no one to be blamed for what is unavoidably true. The great fact of life is uncertainty. The only thing we can do is to recognize the uncertainty and govern ourselves accordingly.

It is true that a considerable number of people have suffered through bank failures. In a time of declining prices the banks that have not been well managed always have difficulty. Some also that through no fault of their own have met losses have been compelled to close. But that does not mean a total loss to depositors. Sometimes the loss is heavy, but sometimes payment is made in full. In any case funds are tied up and much inconvenience results.

Our national banking system is as sound as generations of experience have been able to make it. Most of the states follow a similar system. The nature of investments is regulated by law, and most banks are carefully supervised, rigidly controlled, and frequently examined by government agents. While absolute safety has been impossible to secure, it is probable that the records of money deposited in properly regulated banks in this country would show over a series of years that it has been in the safest place to keep funds.

Banks are an absolute necessity for the transaction of business. If it were possible to conceive of all of them being closed, starvation would face most of us inside of ten days. They exist to facilitate the process of exchange, which is the basis of all business. They are one of the main sources of credit, on which our economic welfare largely depends.

It is apparent that if their source of currency were cut off by people taking money out of banks and hoarding it, locking it up, or hiding it away, our banking system soon would become deranged and the whole nation would begin to suffer losses. Loans would have to be called, mortgages canceled, prices would fall, wages decline, credit would fail, and a general panic would be produced.

If all the people attempted to draw their money from the banks, all commerce would be reduced to barter, and universal bankruptcy would prevail.

While particular banks may become unsound, we can feel adequately certain that our banking system as a whole will not become unsound. If it ever did, we should find that the money we had hidden away had become unsound also. It would not be possible to buy anything with it. All exchange would be at an end. Even payments by the federal government would have to be suspended. While keeping money in banks involves some risk, because possession of property always involves risks, it is a risk that must be taken. Compared with the certain calamity that would result if the people drew all money out of banks, the risk can be considered as negligible.

Those who are engaged in hoarding currency are probably no safer as a class than those who keep their funds in the banks. They are injuring themselves and everybody else. They are in the position of not taking their part of the risks of life and are trying to make themselves safe by letting others carry their risks for them.

It might be a great personal comfort if we could lay all the blame for our misfortunes upon some source outside ourselves. That is why it is easy to convince some of us that we have not failed, but society has failed. Of course, it would follow that if society were to be blamed for our failures, that some society must be credited with our successes. If we want to look at it that way we shall have to admit that on the whole, society in this country has done very well by us. Our country, over its span of history, has been considerable of a success.

But while there is a relationship of all of us, which we term society, that differs from each of us, just as a house differs from the individual bricks in it, yet people are not bricks, and moral responsibility cannot be shifted to others. It must rest with the individual. The same society produced Paul and Judas, Washington and Arnold, Lincoln and Tweed, Edison and the gang leader.

HAPPY little girl, just bursting with pep, and she has never tasted a "tonic!"

Every child's stomach, liver, and bowels need stimulating at times, but give children something you know all about.

Follow the advice of that famous family physician who gave the world Syrup Pepsin. Stimulate the body's vital organs. Dr. Caldwell's prescription of pure pepsin, active senna, and fresh herbs is a mild stimulant that keeps the system from getting sluggish.

If your youngsters don't do well at school, don't play as hard or eat as well as other children do, begin this evening with Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. This gentle stimulant will soon right things! The bowels will move with better regularity and thoroughness. There won't be so many sick spells or colds. You'll find it just as wonderful for adults, too, in larger spoonfuls!

Get some Syrup Pepsin; protect your household from those bilious days, frequent headaches, and that sluggish state of half-health that means the bowels need stimulating. Keep this preparation in the home to use instead of harsh cathartics that cause chronic constipation if taken too often. You can always get Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin at any drug store; they have it all ready in big bottles.

LEN SMALL
THE BUILDER,
SAY FRIENDS

Among the many good and logical reasons urged for the return of former Governor Len Small to the executive chair by his friends, there is none more important than that of his great experience and the poise he would bring to affairs in Illinois.

As governor Mr. Small gave the state more for its money than it received either before or after his administration his friends point out He redeemed his pledge of reduced taxes and kept his promise on road building to the extent that Illinois took first place among the states of the number and quality of its highways. And this without one cent being added to general taxes.

Mr. Small served the state during the post war depression of 1921 and 1922 and in the face of unusual conditions inaugurated a program of construction and public work that did much to help restore prosperity within the shortest possible time. In addition he solved problems of administration left as a heritage of war conditions and solved them so ably and quietly that the state at large hardly knew they had existed.
